

FIT Mail Out Initiative

Starting in January 2022, eligible Albertans aged 50 to 74 will have the option to order a Fecal Immunochemical Test (FIT) online at ScreeningforLife.ca or by calling AHS Screening Programs.

Eligibility will be determined through a self-assessment questionnaire. Individuals who meet FIT's average risk criteria and are currently due for screening will be mailed a test directly to their home.

Why a FIT Mail Out initiative now?

As a result of the COVID-19 pandemic, the existing gap in Alberta's colorectal cancer screening rates has increased. Delays in screening and missed colorectal cancer diagnoses will disproportionately burden and affect those living in rural or remote areas of the province, the underserved as well as those living in low socioeconomic environments.

Implementation of this initiative provides Albertans with options to access screening, helps to address patient barriers and works to overcome health disparities.

What does the evidence say?

Mailed FIT programs¹:

- Are an effective way to screen more patients (i.e., improved rates of colorectal cancer screening).
- Can lessen the burden on primary care physicians to discuss and recommend screening during office visits.
- Can address health disparities and are cost-effective.
- Patients appreciate having options when it comes to accessing screening.

Who is the ordering physician for FITs that are mailed out?

Dr. Huiming Yang, Medical Director with AHS Screening Programs, will be listed as the ordering physician for all FIT kits ordered through the online and phone system. For more information about test results and follow-up care, click here.

How will Albertans learn about the FIT Mail Out option?

Albertans will receive a letter when they turn 50 inviting them to get screened for colorectal cancer.

Albertans receiving a normal FIT result letter will learn about online ordering for their next FIT. Both letters include the following information:

There are 2 easy ways to get your free FIT!
